VitalEngine in action: A real-world account of increased efficiencies

> VitalEngine's tagline - Communicate. Collaborate. Accelerate. - is a very true but condensed version of what we're constantly striving for in healthcare. Here's a real-world example of that tagline in action this week as told to us by one of our customers.

A physician in rural Alabama was performing a heart catheterization. He found a severe lesion in one of the arteries, a fairly complex issue, and wanted to consider treatment options. He sent the images and pertinent records to a large hospital in Birmingham through VitalEngine. The Birmingham team reviewed the images and felt that this patient was a great candidate for a stent, however, this was not an option in the small rural town. The Birmingham team activated their internal team through a group chat on Vchat, preparing them for the impending arrival of this patient. Simultaneously, they used their clinical trial group chat (also already established on Vchat) to evaluate and enroll the patient in a clinical trial. This was all set in motion before the ambulance arrived.

When the patient arrived in Birmingham, he was immediately accepted in the Cath Lab to undergo the procedure. Everything went well and remarkably, the patient went home the same day.

This case highlights the efficiencies that VitalEngine brings to the table. In addition, the sending physician is so pleased with the easy collaboration process that he will continue to send patients to this facility.

VitalEngine truly is the "easy button" in healthcare communication and collaboration. If you'd like to incorporate these benefits into your own practice or clinic, visit vitalengine.com for more information or to schedule a demonstration.
